FOREST FIRE PREVENTION IS EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS

New Hampshire faces a continuing challenge in its forest fire problem — 97 percent of all our forest fires being man-caused and preventable — a serious indictment of interest in our own welfare and that of our neighbor. Both the State and the towns are striving diligently to effectively meet the challenge through education of the public to the threat fire presents to our woodlands, by maintaining a well trained corps of wardens and deputy wardens in every community and by providing ample opportunity for all who wish to dispose of unwanted waste materials. Careless and perverseness, however, continue to be the big hurdles.

Thoughtlessly discarded lighted cigars, cigarettes and matches from moving vehicles by hikers, hunters and fishermen; careless burning of debris during hazardous periods in dangerous locations, illegal burning, improperly extinguished debris, camp and cook fires — all result in serious loss of property, disruption of industry and farm work and unnecessary expenditure of town and state funds.

To meet the challenge successfully, the state, your community and your local forest fire warden need YOUR thoughtful and cooperative effort. The rules are simple:

1. Don't burn at home — use your town dump and avoid all fire problems.
2. If you do burn, be sure to secure a written permit from your local forest fire warden when the ground is not covered with snow. Permits are required for open debris fires, home incinerators, outdoor fire places and camp fires. Your warden is instructed to permit burning if weather conditions, site and type of burning are safe.

3. Be sure that all lighted materials — cigars, cigarettes and matches — are completely out before discarding them. Use ash trays in automobiles.

4. Make certain that your debris, camp and cook fires are completely out before leaving them.

5. Insist that others be careful and comply with burning requirements.

6. Call the warden promptly when fire is detected and aid him to extinguish it.

REMEMBER — the fire you prevent might be the one which could burn YOUR property.

POLICY

1. General policy in regard to control and/or rationing of critical equipment, fuel, food, clothing and other items can be stated in general terms only. In order to provide the best possible guide lines the policies outlined herein will be adhered to, subject to modification as necessary depending on the extent and nature of the emergency. It is understood that these policies become effective immediately upon declaration of a Civil Defense Emergency by the Governor in case of a threatened or actual enemy attack. In case of a natural disaster of such magnitude as to require controls, they will be in effect only when specifically ordered by the Governor and to the extent then so ordered.

FUEL

1. Gasoline, kerosene, lubricating oil, heating fuel (solid and liquid) held by retailers will pass to control of the local civil defense director subject to instructions of the State Coordinator for fuel.

2. Wholesale stocks of the above items will pass to the control of the State Coordinator for fuel.

Dutch elm disease threatens to wipe out one of our most cherished trees. But scores of communities have demonstrated that the blight can be curbed and controlled

It's Not Too Late to Save Our Elms

Condensed from American Forests

Peter Farb

THE LORDLIEST shade trees rooted in American soil—our elms—are today in jeopardy. At least 200 million trees, in every state in the nation, are threatened by Dutch elm disease, a virulent fungus with which tiny bark beetles inoculate healthy trees. The fungus plugs up the elm's water-conducting vessels, wilting leaves and killing branches. Once infected, the tree is doomed.

If we abandon our elms to this disease, the results could be devastating: municipal coffers plundered by an estimated 15 billion dollars just for removal and burning of stricken trees. Replanting other shade trees would cost many billions more—but it would be folly to suppose that we could ever replace the stately elms.

The fungus, first discovered in Holland after World War I, has virtually decimated Europe's elm population. In the 24 years since it became solidly entrenched around New York City the disease has erased perhaps 40 million elms from the American landscape. It continues to take a heavy toll in at least 21 states—from Maine to Virginia and westward to Wisconsin and Missouri.

One encouraging fact, however, emerges from my recent survey of Dutch elm disease: cities and towns in the infected area have consistently proved that control programs can save the elms. Moreover, protection is far less costly than doing nothing—and then spending tax dollars to uproot dead trunks.

In 1945, Greenwich, Conn., one of the first American communities to be invaded by the fungus, was threatened with loss of most of its 6000 elms. Joe Dietrich, the town's energetic Superintendent of Parks, called a meeting of civic and garden club representatives and presented the facts on Dutch elm control. The wild elms growing in swamps and woodlands couldn't be saved, he said, but for little more than a dollar a year per tree the destruction of the city's valued elms could be reduced to a minimum. It would be done by going after the beetle carriers of the disease, not the disease itself: removing all dead elm wood, potential breeding material for the beetles, and spraying the elms with an armor of DDT. "It costs the town roughly $75 to remove a diseased tree," Dietrich told the group. "That money could be used to protect the same elm for more than 50 years. We'd have a living tree, not a dead stump."

The clubs petitioned the Board of Estimate and money was promptly appropriated. The local radio station and newspaper gave periodic bulletins about progress of the fight; an exhibit explaining the control program went up in the public library. Connecticut Light & Power Co. sent out news items with its monthly bills. Neighborhood groups pooled their dollars for coordinated campaigns on privately owned elms.

In the last ten years the annual loss of elms in Greenwich has dropped from 186 to little more than 30, and Dutch elm disease control is now just "routine maintenance" there.

Other towns and cities have had equal success. Greenfield, Mass., which has nearly one elm for each inhabitant, has kept the rate of afflicted trees to a negligible two tenths of one percent a year. The whole town is alerted to the threat and the tree warden receives about 1400 phone calls annually from citizens reporting suspicious elms. In Brookline, Mass., while neighboring communities show double and triple the loss of previous years, the percentage of elms lost is no worse than that of maples or other shade trees. "If we were to let our elms go because of neglect it would cost our taxpayers well over a million dollars for removal alone," Daniel Warren, Superintendent of Parks, told me, "to say nothing of the decline in real estate values, loss of civic beauty beyond price. When you save elms, you save dollars."

Can every community afford to maintain a control program? They can't afford not to. Witness what happened in the village of Bexley, a suburb of Columbus, Ohio, which abandoned its elms to Dutch elm disease. I drove through Bexley's broad boulevards and park areas—almost completely denuded of elms, only long rows of great decapitated trunks remaining. The village has already spent nearly $100,000 for removal plus more than $25,000 for planting saplings. And Urbana and Champaign, Ill., have spent some $200,000 in the last five years to remove trees stricken by the fungus. "Inertia and penny-pinching can sacrifice our elms—and invite an economic problem perhaps a hundred times the cost of control measures," says Dr. Howard C. Miller, the Dutch elm expert at the State University College of Forestry, Syracuse, N. Y.

To finance a control program, Buffalo, N. Y., floated "tree bonds," in the same way they finance other municipal improvement projects. In Freeport, Ill., voters approved an "insurance policy" on their elms: a five-mill tax on each $100 assessed valuation—for control measures before the disease strikes. Often civic groups can take the lead. In Sycamore, Ill., the local Chamber of Commerce acted as clearinghouse for homeowners who wanted their trees protected by spraying. Done on a large scale, the spraying was more effective—and the cost to individuals was reduced by about two thirds. Now the city is administering the control program, including the hiring of a professional forester.

Early detection of a diseased tree is vital to protect the healthy ones nearby. In Wheaton, Ill., the city was divided into 29 "tree protection districts" and the elms in each were put under the surveillance of one of the 29 cooperating civic organizations. In the Greenbrier Hills subdivision of Kirkwood, Mo., garden club members plastered every diseased tree with giant crosses of yellow paint. When land-owners saw the 250 marked elms, they awakened to the threat and started doing something about removal.

Even if your community has been afflicted for years, it is not too late to start a control program. In Alford, Mass., which found its first diseased tree in 1941 and by 1950 was losing nearly 300 elms a year, the state and Berkshire County commissioners worked out a joint program. Within two years, the annual rate of loss had been cut to 80 trees.

Once started, a control program must be sustained. Compare Amherst and Easthampton, Mass., only ten miles apart. Amherst continued to protect its elms; Easthampton made a good effort, then neglected the problem for two years. While

Amherst's rate of diseased trees decreased to under one percent, Easthampton within two years saw its loss jump from no trees to 11 percent of the elm population! So instead of spending just $1650 a year for control, Easthampton had to increase its outlay to $11,750.

Should we continue to plant more elms? "Definitely," says Dr. Albert E. Dimond, chief plant pathologist at the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station in New Haven. "The disease won't make the elm extinct, but man will if he doesn't continue to plant the tree." Greenwich, Conn., for example, sets out more new elms each year than it loses from the disease. Nearly 500 have been planted and but one has been attacked by the fungus.

Science, too, has been working to find species resistant to the disease. Already available at commercial nurseries is a highly resistant tree—the Christine Buisman elm—the result of 16 years of experiments in Holland. And in the United States an intensive search is now under way among our native elms for trees that have resistant characteristics.

Chemotherapy—putting chemicals to work to fight the disease inside the tree—is also being tried, and at least 200 compounds have been tested since 1940 at the Connecticut and Rhode Island agricultural experiment stations. A number of these compounds have worked experimentally, but they are expensive, of short duration and impractical for large-scale use. It does appear, though, that we are on the threshold of a major discovery in fighting the Dutch elm fungus. "Chemotherapy is an excellent possibility, but we just don't have all the answers as yet," I was told by Roger U. Swingle, pathologist in USDA's Ornamental Plants Branch at Columbus, Ohio.

It is not too late to save the elm, a tree so deeply rooted in the American landscape as to be an actual part of the architecture of thousands of our towns and cities. For its many esthetic benefits—and for hard-headed municipal economy alone—you couldn't do better than to start a Dutch elm control program in your community.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS

February 1, 1958

To the School Board of Deerfield, New Hampshire:

For your consideration and study, may I present my eleventh annual report of the educational status of the district and at the same time express my thanks and appreciation for your desire to make the George B. White School a place where all the children of all the people of the district may grow and develop according to his own individual capacities and abilities.

At the close of the school year in June 1957, three of your teachers left the system, but after spending nearly all summer hunting for replacements and with considerable luck, we were able to complete the staff before school opened in September. Mr. Griffin was the sole returning teacher. In this we were fortunate not only because of his experience as a teacher, but also because the continuity of the school was maintained. He was continued in Grades 7-8. Mrs. Cleo Kamveris, a woman of five or more years of experience in the public schools of Detroit, Michigan, and a graduate of Wayne University, was elected to replace Mr. Charles Thorne in Grades 5-6 just a short time before school opened. Miss Constance Johnson, a Manchester girl and a graduate of Plymouth Teachers College with a year's experience in this part of the state came to teach in Grades 3-4 in the position held by Miss Joan Converse. Mrs. Ramona Stevens of Raymond and Epping with three or four years experience and a graduate of Keene Teachers College replaced Mrs. Stevenson in Grades 1-2. Mrs. Reed was continued as the music teacher until about a month ago when she became sick and the question of her return is indefinite.

Probably the greatest sorrow which was sustained in relation to the school was the passing of Miss Margaret E. Cronin, R. N. She had been the school nurse for a long time, in fact, in all probability you will find she was the first school nurse in the district in combination with Raymond, Candia, and Deerfield. She was warm-hearted, sincere, and well-received wherever her work beckoned; surely a loss to the school and community.

It was necessary to elect, therefore, a new school nurse to take her place. This was done shortly after school opened in the person of Mrs. Ruth Dearborn, R. N., of Chester, New Hampshire. She has become the nurse also in Candia at the Moore School.

There have been changes made in the School Board since the last report. The present board includes Mrs. Ruth B. Pennell, Mr. Cornelius P. Short who recently replaced Mr. Ralph Chase; and Mr. Wadsworth Winslow, Jr. Both Mrs. Pennell and Mr. Short will be up for election at the School District meeting in March 1958.

With the cost of education increasing each year, especially in the two largest items in the budget — tuition and teachers' salaries — we must again face a situation which seems almost endless and yet if your children are to be educated to meet the modern problems which will confront them at every turn, this increasing cost must be met.

The tuition cost for this year will run well over the budget. There are two or three important factors which have caused this deficit. First is the increased cost of tuitions which were set after the budget was set up and voted; secondly, the number of students attending the secondary schools was much greater than anticipated; and thirdly, the new Foster Child Law which can really change the situation without any notice whatsoever.

Coe-Brown's tuition rate will jump from $354 to $367 per pupil for next year because this Academy charges the state average; Manchester's tuition for this year is $371.23 (State average plus a 2% rental charge of $17.23). The tuition has not been set for 1958-1959, but in talking with the Superintendents I was told that the recommendation had been made to charge the state average ($367.00) plus a 2% rental charge on the capital investment of about $17.00 which would give an approximate total tuition cost per pupil of close to $384.00, about $10 more per pupil than this year; Pembroke Academy's rate has been set at $330, $30 more than this year; Raymond's tuition had not been changed when this report is being written — the rate is $300.00; Concord's tuition rate will be $375 next year, $15 above the rate this year.

The number of students attending the secondary schools next year will be increased at least six. To date we have 36 students attending high school and the record shows that there will be at least 42 attending.

A year ago we made no provision in the budget for the Foster Child Law because it was still in the experimental stage. This law means the tuition of children whose original home or domicile was Deerfield and who had been placed in various homes around the state — called foster homes — had to be paid by the school district of Deerfield, elementary or secondary. It so happened that Deerfield has to pay out a total of $1,366.30 for these children, but fortunately we also collected our fair share for those children whose original home was elsewhere and who were attending either the White School or some secondary school from Deerfield.

The item of teachers' salaries is becoming more acute with each year. We were told at a State School Boards Association meeting this last fall that if we thought teachers were hard to get for this present school year, to wait until next year and the next five years. This problem has been and is being caused by the increasing costs to the teacher and the competition involved with the surrounding cities and towns. According to data received from the State Department of Education, there will be more than 500 vacancies in teaching positions in the State for next year with about 150 qualified teachers to fill them. In checking over the needs for this Union, taking into consideration both replacements and added new teachers, the least number required to fill the jobs will be twenty-five. Is it any wonder that this situation coupled with the fact that teachers are leaving the state for more lucrative positions will make this problem even more acute this summer. What would you suggest doing if school opens in the fall with only half the needed teachers ready for business?

Certain recommendations made a year ago have been completed although the greater part of the cost was met through subscriptions. The "hot top" was placed at the rear of the building to protect both the grounds and the inside of the building; a new ceiling was installed along with a new tiled floor in the kitchen; a new incinerator was built so that for the first time we have a real receptacle for disposing of paper and other similar materials outside the building without risk of fire; and some of the locks on the doors of the building were replaced and repaired. The jobs were needed and well done. For the coming year it is recommended that a start should be made at installing acoustical tile on the ceilings of the upper and lower halls. If the upper hall could be completed this next year and the lower hall the following year, the expense would be small, but the results would be gratifying and worthwhile especially to the boys and girls of the school.

If you will consult the report of a year ago you will find that your attention was called to the fact that in the very near future some provision must be made for expansion.

Sometimes parents and other citizens of the town are not too familiar with the general organization of the school. This refers to enrollments and floor space especially upon which expansion is based. Therefore, this is probably a good time to make some report of the number of children in the school, the manner in which these children are being assimilated, and the possible conclusions which can be drawn because of this procedure.

To January 29, 1958 there have been 144 registered pupils in the school, 11 of whom have left, leaving the present enrollment of 133. These pupils are divided into the traditional grades with 26 pupils in Grade 1; 23 in Grade 2; 10 in Grade 3; 9 in Grade 4; 18 in Grade 5; 15 in Grade 6; 17 in Grade 7; and 15 in Grade 8. These pupils are enrolled as follows:—

Mrs. Stevens has 33, Miss Johnson has 32, Mrs. Kamveris has 30, and Mr. Griffin has 38. Theoretically, as you know, each teacher is assigned two grades; Mrs. Stevens 1-2, Miss Johnson 3-4, Mrs. Kamveris 5-6, and Mr. Griffin 7-8. But in actual practice this does not work that way because if a grade line was drawn sharply, Mrs. Stevens would have 49 pupils, Miss Johnson 19 pupils, Mrs. Kamveris 33 pupils, and Mr. Griffin 32 pupils.

Therefore, in order to equalize the load which must be done in the primary grades, we have arranged and assigned the children so that each teacher would have approximately the same number of children although this could not be done in all cases. This does not mean that any child has been retarded or accelerated from grade to grade. It does mean that the children have been divided because of the numbers and placed in the various rooms so as to meet their abilities and capacities to learn, to grow, and produce in an environment which best fits the individual child. The obvious reason, of course, is to reduce over-crowding in one or two rooms for both teachers and pupils.

The present set-up now shows that with the exception of the primary group, each teacher has children from three grades and about the same number of children in each room. We feel that it is working for the best interests of the children involved.

This procedure is considered good education as has been proved from the findings and research in child growth. Teachers are now being trained more intensively in the colleges to teach individuals. For this reason it is recommended by the men and women in this business of education that in many groups the number of children should be reduced in size (20 to 25) especially in the primary and intermediate years. This not only gives the teacher the opportunity for more intensive planning, but also increases the floor space for pupil activity, a vital factor in the educational growth of all children. This also points out the fact that school rooms are being built larger — from just over 800 square feet to over 900 square feet, and it emphasizes the reason for movable furniture and other modern equipment.

Whether you agree with what has been done or not is your privilege, but in organizing and developing such procedure particular attention was given to each individual child and his right to be taught according to his capacity to learn.

As the situation presents itself today, it has been recommended that a remedial reading teacher should be engaged on a full-time or part-time basis (if one can be found) who would work and aid those children who need it. This procedure is frowned upon in some places because it is believed that this job belongs to the classroom teacher. I am inclined to agree with this last statement, but I would go further and modify it by saying that under our present situation with large classes and the range of the children therein, remedial teaching is practically impossible although attempts are being made daily to overcome any deficiency which arises. With the hue and cry today on the teaching of science and mathematics for the gifted child, is it any wonder that a teacher with a group of children between 30 and 40 is looking for a position with fewer pupils that will pay more money?

However, other towns and districts are having the same troubles and the same problems. Some of them are trying to solve them with new schools and better teachers. Some of them are still in the process of study. Some of them, through no fault of their own, are taking what they can get, hoping for the best. And some are doing nothing about it. This is life. I do believe, however, that regardless of personal feelings that Deerfield wants the best schools money can buy and the present school board has given every evidence of that desire.

Again, may I thank the members of the board for their kindness in working in harmony with me; and the principal and teachers of the school as well as the other personnel.

Respectfully submitted,

MURRAY H. WATSON,

Superintendent of Schools.
